Technical Assistance Information Clearing House
200 Park Avenue South, New York, N. Y. 10003

THE AMERICAN COUNCIL OF VOLUNTARY AGENCIES FOR FOREIGN SERVICE was established in 1943 to provide a means for consultation, coordination and planning, and to assure the maximum effective use of contributions by the American community for the assistance of people overseas. Through the Council, 43 member American voluntary agencies engaged in programs of active service overseas now coordinate their plans and activities both at home and abroad, not only among themselves but also with non-member agencies and governmental, inter-governmental and international organizations. Since 1955 the Council has operated the Technical Assistance Information Clearing House under contract with the United States Agency for International Development.

THE TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE INFORMATION CLEARING HOUSE serves as a center of information on the socio-economic development programs abroad of U.S. non-profit organizations. Through publications and the maintenance of an inquiry service, it makes available to organizations, the government, researchers, and other users, information about development assistance with particular reference to the resources and concerns of the private, voluntary, non-profit sector.

THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON VOLUNTARY FOREIGN AID was established in 1946 by Presidential Directive "to tie together the governmental and private programs in the field of foreign relief and to work with interested agencies and groups." The purpose of the Committee is to guide the public and the agencies seeking the support of the public, in the appropriate and productive use of voluntary contributions for foreign aid. The Advisory Committee, made up of private citizens who serve without compensation, is in the Agency for International Development (AID); the Secretariat is located in AID's Voluntary Agencies Division, Office of Private Resources. Agencies registered with the Advisory Committee are eligible for certain benefits, including government grants of agricultural commodities under PL 480 legislation; reimbursement by the Government for the overseas shipment of these foods and their own donated supplies; and various kinds of property that are excess to government needs.

INTRODUCTION

This is the ninth in a series of reports issued since October 1965 by the Technical Assistance Information Clearing House describing all known programs of assistance to the Vietnamese in South Vietnam that are currently operated and supported by U.S. non-profit organizations.

The majority of the organizations listed are voluntary agencies. Missions, foundations, and other non-profit, non-governmental organizations have been included in order to present a comprehensive picture of the range and extent of the U.S. private effort to provide the Vietnamese people with relief, material aid, and assistance in medicine, education, community development, social services, etc. U.S. non-profit organizations such as the United Seamen's Service, United Service Organizations, Inc., (USO), and the American Red Cross have programs in South Vietnam primarily to provide services to U.S. civilian and/or military personnel, although United Seamen's Service also provides vocational training and language classes for its Vietnamese employees. These programs are not described in the report, which includes descriptions only for those programs whose main purpose is to provide assistance to the South Vietnamese people.

This report is in two parts. Part I describes 35 programs operated by U.S. non-profit organizations. The organizations are administratively and financially responsible for these programs in which approximately 565 U.S. personnel, 97 international, and 684 Vietnamese serve in South Vietnam. The report does not reflect the participation of many other organizations, individuals, and institutions which, as members of the administering agencies, channel their financial and material contributions to South Vietnam through them.

Part II, Programs of Support, includes 25 U.S. non-profit organizations that are providing aid to Vietnamese institutions; contributing to programs in South Vietnam operated by other U.S. organizations; contributing to programs operated by international organizations of which they are a branch; or providing training in the U.S. or abroad to either Vietnamese or to international personnel who will be serving in South Vietnam. (U.S. college and university student-exchange or scholarship programs have not been included.) These organizations are not administratively responsible for a program in South Vietnam, although some of them do have personnel who work in cooperation with the personnel of other organizations in South Vietnam.

The major emphasis of the programs continues to be on providing direct relief, material aid, and medical assistance to refugees and other Vietnamese. Of the 35 U.S. organizations operating in South Vietnam, 30 were able to provide TAICH with financial figures which indicate that about $12.9 million is budgeted to operate these assistance programs in South Vietnam in the current fiscal year. In addition, 11 operating organizations which ship supplies to Vietnam reported that they budgeted an additional $8.2 million for shipments for the current fiscal year. Of the 25 organizations currently supporting programs of assistance in South Vietnam, 12 were able to provide TAICH with financial figures for the current year; these indicate that about $440,000 has been contributed by these agencies in financial and material aid. Four other agencies reported actual expenditures for the period of January through October, 1968, totaling about $766,000. (These figures are approximate owing to differences in fiscal years, methods of financial reporting, and methods of estimating dollar value of commodities, equipment, and material shipped.)

The organizations included in this report submitted the data on their programs to TAICH within the last month. Subsequent editions of this report will cover changes in the size, scope, and number of programs, and will include new organizations and programs as they come to our attention.
